News Report

Wounded & Missing

After Attack on Turkish Trench

Much anxiety is being felt by his parents at 32, Wheatland Lane, over the safety of Leading Seaman Alfred Scott, R.N.V.R., of the Nelson Battalion, who was reported missing on the 13th July, following an attack on one of the hills in Gallipoli. He is 30 years of age, and had been in the Navy for five years, being latterly employed as an engineer at Messrs. Rowlands, at Seacombe. He went out to the Dardanelles at the commencement of the campaign, being with the Nelson Battalion, in which there are many local men and according to some of which he was wounded during an attack and could not make his way back into the British lines when our forces had to yield some portion of the captured territory.

As yet the Admiralty have received no report on him, but his mother is hoping to obtain information from Constantinople.
